The protest of the tesm Captains who objected to the teams of the First and Second Connecticut regiments shooting in the Army and Navy Journal, and inter-State matches, have been overrisled, and the Connecticut men will accordingly do their best to carry the trophy, or trophies, to their State.

FREE EDUCATION.

The free evening school of art attached to the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen, No. 473 Broadway, was opened on Monday evening for the winter term. Last evening over 300 young men were busy at work quietly pursuing their studies. The class in architectural drawing is under the care of Mr. Hubler, the class in mechanical drawing is under Mr. Moncton's the class in mechanical drawing is under Mr. Moneton's care, and the free hand drawing class for stonecutiers, Kc. is supervised by Mr. Van Kuyk. In an adjoining wing is a very large class in bookkeeping under the care of Mr. Warner. The entire classons are superintended by Mr. Henry H. Wyman. The chairman of the school committee is Mr. Alexander Gaw, who is accompanied by Mr. Thomas D. Steisen, another of the committee, and both are present every evening until the school is fairly started for the term. The society has room for 350 pupils and already also names are on the books. By Saturday every place will be occupied.

While a student he was also a hospital walker, and fitted himself for reasonable success both in surgery and therapenties. He was a tutor, a lecturer, a "supply" in Swedenborgian and Baptist pulpits, an incumbent of a Unitarian parish, in quick succession, in the Northern and Midland English counties, for some years.

Dr. Porteous studied for and was admitted to orders in the English Church nearly twelve years ago. He advanced to the charge of a suborban London church, and thence to the purchase of the liwing of St. George's church, in Hanover square, in December, 1873, Dr. Porteous embarked for New York in the National line steamer Ethiopia. On his arrival in New York Dr. Porteous, on January 12, 1874, secured a temporary license from Bishop Potter to preach in the diocese of New York, and one from Bishop Littlejohn to preach in the diocese of Loug Island. Potter to preach in the diocese of New York, and one from Bishop Littlejohn to preach in the diocese of Long Island. Dr. Porteous made a more popular impression in a shorter time than any man that ever preached in Brooklyn.

Dr. Porteous first lectured in the Academy under the management of James McCloskey. The subject was "Genius and the Law of its Operation," and it had exemplary readings from Shakespeare, Milton and Edgar Allan Poe, and dealt with Newton, Napoleon, Milton, the Bard of Avon and Abraham Lincoln. Thereafter Dr. Porteous lectured in both cities in many places.

The Doctor's enterprise always suffered for want of organization, and he was not able to sustair-confidence in those who could have supplied that want. His audience shrank from theusands to a few score and from vast halls to small limits. Towards the last Rev. S. Mille Hegeman and Rev. Mathew Hale Smith and Rev. George E. Thrall were all the ministers who followshiped with them were not a multitude.

The licotor refused to preach for those who would or could not pay, and he felt himself justified in the refusal. At the last meeting of a social kind with the remnant of his people, he asked those present to accept his best thanks for everything they had been and everything they had done. He did not ask them to pray for him—he could do enough of that himself—but to bear him in their kindest sympathies and to remember what he had been and how far short he had failen of what he might have been or might be.

A GLADIATOR'S DEATH.

THE DYING MOMENTS OF NED O'BALDWIN, THE TRISH GIANT-POST-MORTEM EXAMINATION OF Notwithstanding every effort that science and skill could bring to bear, the champion Irish pugilist, Ned O'Baidwin, who was shot on last Monday night at his place of business on West street, died yesterday moraing at a few moments before eleven, at the residence of his friend, Mr. Cassidy, No. 114 Greenwich street. During Tuesday night the pugilistic giant was attended by his physicians and several at-tempts were made to probe the wound, but without success. He suffered the most intense agony all night. As daylight approached he became worse, and prayed to God to end his sufferings. His personal friends, Mr. and Mrs. Cassidy, were untiring in their attentions to the dying man. He deeply appreciated their kind efforts and many times during the night would thank them for their labors to relieve his sufferings. About six o'clock in the morning he asked for Dr. Shine, his attending physician, and also for a priest. He said he knew that he was dying, and consequently his request was complied with. LAST RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

About seven o'clock a priest arrived and prayed with him and consoled him. Up to within ten minutes of his death he was perfectly conscious and talked to his friends in a calm manner, only now and then grouning on account of the severe pains that convulsed him.

About nine o'clock he said to Mr. Cassidy:—'I have fooled you many a time, but I am not going to fool you

He made Mr. Cassidy promise to have his remains taken to Boston and buried by the side of his brother. O'Baidwin has two sisters living in Boston, named Anna and Norah; also a sister-in-law. During the morning O'Baidwin would frequently ask for his sister Anna, and several times exclaimed:—"U'ri I only had my dear sister Anna here. Do send for her." A telegraphic despatch was sent to her, but abe did not arrive.
